

RESPECT

Let's Get It— IN WRITING!

...Jane Smith needs to change her schedule to be home when her son returns from school. Management says “No way”...

...Bill Jones is ordered to function as a crew leader during an emergency. Despite his excellent work, he receives no extra pay, no “Thank you,” nothing...

...We took a cut in wages and benefits when the company fell on hard times. When the company turned the corner and began making record profits, we were rewarded — with layoffs.

What does R-E-S-P-E-C-T mean to you?

To us, it means being treated like men and women, not like children who can be ordered around and intimidated whenever a supervisor feels like it.

Without a union, we have no voice. The boss has all the power and we are totally at his mercy.

That's not only wrong — it's un-American.

Respect on the job is something every American worker deserves. And respect can only come when we can look our employers straight in the eye as equals.

The only way to gain the respect we deserve is to win a Teamster contract.

The only way to protect our jobs and our families is with a Teamsters contract. A Teamsters contract means the opportunity for better wages, better benefits and job security.

More than 1.4 million Teamsters already have the power and respect that come with a Teamsters contract.
